

Casino To Open In Puerto Rica

A new casino resort is to be opened Puerto Rica, in South America. The casino is to be built by Starwood Hotels and Resorts Worldwide, and it has recently been confirmed that it will open as early as November this year. The complex will include various leisure and business facilities, and as well as the casino it will also include a convention centre for meetings, a luxury hotel, a pool, a spa and a retail space.

A very large amount of space has been set aside for the development, which will be situated in the residential and commercial district in San Juan. San Juan is a large city in Puerto Rica, but it is not known for its business dealings within the tourism or gaming industries. However, with the development of the new casino complex, and everything that comes with it, this all could be about to change. The residential and commercial district where Starwood Hotels and Resorts Worldwide will build the casino complex is in the newest part of San Juan, which is a large part of the reason why it has been picked as a prime location. It is expected that residents and businesses in the area will welcome the new development, and so far there have been no complaints from residents.

The casino complex in San Juan is rumoured to have been developed in order to revive the reputation of Starwood Hotels and Resorts Worldwide, which some have said has been flagging in recent years. However, the likely success of this new development is likely to quieten anyone who may previously have wanted to criticise the organisation. The speed at which the development has been planned is also remarkable, and it will be a very good piece of publicity for Starwood if the complex is hoped by November, as has been promised.
